Subject : Mirage brand products comply to CARB 2 Certification

Dear Mirage Dealer,

Following recent news reports and coverage regarding CARB 2 certification, we would like to reassure you that all Mirage products are in full compliance with Phase 2 of CARB 93120 certification and thus meet the California Air Resource Board's Airborne Toxic Control Measure to Reduce Formaldehyde Emissions.

As per the certification requirements and effective dates:

- All Mirage Engineered products manufactured as of January, 2010 comply to Phase 2 of CARB 93120 certification.
- All Mirage Lock products manufactured as of January, 2012 comply to Phase 2 of CARB 93120 certification.
- CARB requirements do not apply to Mirage Classic (solid) products because the regulation applies only to substrates used in the manufacturing of engineered type products.

Since the start of our company over 31 years ago the safety of our customers and employees as well as the respect for the environment have been cornerstones of our values. Compliance with the CARB standard is only one step that we take every day. Some examples of our stewardship in sustainability measures are the development of products that meet the LEED indoor environmental quality requirements, implementing ISO standards for quality control, procurement from vendors who practice responsible forestry methods such as the Lacey Act and using waste as a way to generate power for our plants. These are some of the many actions we do daily as part of our environmental responsibility.

All of our products are manufactured in North American facilities, which allows us to have complete quality control in all facets of production which ensures the peace of mind you expect from the Mirage brand.

As you can see well before protecting the environment and public health ever acquired the urgency it has today, we were already taking concrete steps to protect both. People's health and the environment have always been at the heart of our company and we are more committed than ever to pursuing these values.

Should you have any questions or comments, please contact your Mirage Representative.
